

The painting to the left is of Brigham Young's vision of the Salt Lake Temple.

This painting is of the Engen Brothers. They came to Utah for a ski competition and ended up changing Utah's main source of revenue from mining to winter sports and tourism.

The painting to the left is of Jim Bridger tasting the Salt Lake and exclaiming that nothing can grow in a place with so much salt.

To the right, Seraph Young is casting her vote. She was the first woman in Utah to vote.

This mural is located on the ceiling of the Gold Room. It is original to the building.

Caroline Bridge is the longest natural, free standing bridge in Utah. This painting is in the Supreme Court chamber.
